

Naomi Scurvy-McPlankerton
Registered and Licensed Picaroon

International Offices of Piracy
Wall Street, NY 10005

Torn from her native Irish lands when she was only a wee nipper, Naomi Scurvy-McPlankerton went into account at the age of thirteen and has been sailing the seven seas ever since. A natural climber, she is often to be found in the crow's nest and atop the mizzenmast, though earned her Pirate Degree in Careening, her major thesis entitled "Futtocks and Why We Need 'Em." She began her pirate career as a tender, was soon promoted to the station of crimper and has cracked manys the Jenny's teacup in her time.

Her sailing skills number the sloop, the schooner, the yawl and the pinnance, as well as a three-week internship on a galleon as part of the Adriatic Sea Pirate Summer Program. A regular hornswaggler at poker, cribbage, and bridge, her pillage and plundering abilities were learned at the card table, where she is not unaccustomed to splicing the main brace.

Though momentarily separated from her ship, Ms. Scurvy-McPlankerton is currently awaiting the fleet in the port of New York and in the meantime has picked up a nasty habit of singing opera and aaaaaarrrrrrrrt song. Though considered a "morally questionable career" in the pirate community, it is commonly believed there are worse things she could be doing.

For more information on the life and happenings of this picaroon, please follow the No-Can-Tuna Events button at the bottom of the page and fill out the form with your credit card details, social security number, and mother's maiden name, else ye may dance the hempen jig.

REGISTER NOW

and receive your free treasure map and compass in 4-6 weeks.

Terms and conditions apply.